FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

August lived up to its reputation of being a nervy month for equity investors. The MSCI World index - a basket of global equities (in USD) reduced in value by -2.4%. Chinese equities had a far tougher time, falling -8% over the month on the back of weak economic data, falling consumer prices, a deepening real estate crisis and a slump in exports. It has been widely reported that youth unemployment has risen to such an extent that the Chinese Government now choose not to publish the data.

In this environment, the Ravenscroft Global Balanced Fund returned -0.8% which compares to a return of -0.9% from the Investment Association Mixed Investment 20-60% index.

Economic data outside of China has been more mixed, leaving investors still grappling with big questions such as will the much-forecast American recession arrive, and is inflation slowing at a rate that will allow central bankers to change their rhetoric and actions around inflation and interest rates? The jury is still out regarding American recession as economic data this year has consistently been better than forecast, but forward-looking indicators don't paint a rosy picture. To some extent, the outcome will be determined by where inflation and interest rates go from here.

Inflation has been falling swiftly in America but not as swiftly in the UK. We believe we are at, or very close to, the top of the interest rate cycle in America and hope that is also the case in the UK. The tone of central bankers has, at the margin, softened. We expect the bond investments held within the Balanced strategy to begin to deliver attractive positive returns. Initially, when interest rates stop rising, we will benefit from the high yields embedded within these investments then, when interest rates begin to fall, there is the opportunity for capital gains.

We reported in August that our reduction of equity exposure within the Balanced strategy was a temporary measure, so, at the time of writing this commentary the intention is to modestly increase equity exposure during September.

Financial Promotion - The value of the Fund may go down as well as up - you may get back less than you invested.
